

3.1.2

The institution provides seed money to its teachers for research

Preamble

MITADTU actively supports its faculty by providing seed money for research, encouraging innovation and academic growth. This funding allows teachers to initiate exploratory projects, develop pilot studies, and pursue new research ideas. Over the past five years, consistent financial support has been provided to promote a strong research culture. Seed money helps faculty build a foundation for larger, externally funded projects, enhancing the institution's research impact. Clear guidelines and regular reviews ensure effective utilization of funds and contribute to the overall academic development of the institution. Details of year wise seed funding allotment are available below.
